An Insight into Natural Farming

Natural farming is an ecological farming approach established by Masanobu Fukuoka (1913–2008). Fukuoka saw farming not just as a means of producing food but as an aesthetic or spiritual approach to life, the ultimate goal of which was, "the cultivation and perfection of human beings."

Fukuoka's 5 principles of natural farming are, No tillage, No fertilizer, No pesticides, No weeding, No pruning.

Principally, natural farming minimises human labour. Without plowing, seeds germinate well on the surface if site conditions meet the needs of the seeds planted there. Natural farming recognizes soils as a fundamental natural asset. Ancient soils possess physical and chemical attributes which render them capable of generating and supporting life abundance.

According to Fukuoka, tilling actually degrades the delicate balance of a climax soil in the following ways:

- Tilling may destroy crucial physical characteristics of a soil such as water suction, its ability to send moisture upwards, even during dry spells.
- Tilling over-pumps oxygen to local soil residents, such as bacteria and fungi. As a result, the chemistry of the soil changes.
- Tilling uproots all the plants in the area, turning their roots into food for bacteria and fungi. This damages their ability to aerate the soil. Fukuoka, prevented soil erosion by simply growing trees and shrubs on slopes.

Subhash Palekar: is a proponent of zero budget farming. His method of zero budget farming is not dependent on fertilizers or insecticides.

It needs 10 per cent of normal requirement of water. Palekar advocates the use of cow dung as the most valuable material to enrich the soil. That too, from the 'native' cow, the indigenous variety, because it releases less methane, a gas contributing to global warming, than the 'jersey' cow.

According to Palekar, the use of chemical fertilizer generates Nitrous oxide, another greenhouse gas, which escapes into the atmosphere. When we feed chemically grown fodder to cattle, Nitrous oxide from urine and dung goes into the atmosphere. When we decompose the dried remains of chemically grown crops by burning them, Nitrous oxide escapes again.

He also attributes the increased incidence of infertility and diseases such as cancer and diabetes to the intake of 'poisonous food' derived from chemical farming. Drawing a comparison between chemical fertilizers and cow dung, he says, "We get over 300 crore micro organisms from one gram of 'desi' cow dung. It is an ocean of a culture of microorganisms".

His method of zero budget farming is not dependent on fertilizers, insecticide or fungicide. It requires only 10 per cent of the normal requirement of water. About 40 lakh farmers are already practicing it in the States of Maharashtra, Karnataka, Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh and Kerala.

He developed the zero budget system after many years of sustained efforts. He is firmly of the opinion that it will slowly, but surely change the pattern, towards a better farming practice while contributing to the global environment.

Trust Activities: February 2014 – March 2014

Community Lunch & Medical Camp on Int. Women's day

International Women's day was celebrated at Rottigoundanur village, by the Punarnava Trust on 8th March 2014. The village women, men and children, came to enjoy the fare lovingly prepared by the Trust volunteers and served with care. The children of the village took active part in helping the trust to celebrate the day. The sick people took advantage of the free medical camp and consulted the doctors of vaidyagrama on that day. During Pongal, the Trust distributed new clothes for the children of Rottigoundanur.

Recreation for children-Theatre workshop

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, so goes the saying. Punarnava Trust engages the children of Rottigoundanur in sports, games, yoga etc on Saturdays. They play Badminton, learn meaningful stories, Mantras, Keertans and just run around on holidays and Saturdays. The children of the village Rottigoundanur are very fortunate as in February 2014, a German actress visited the village and conducted a Yoga and Theatre workshop for the children. She taught the children, Sun Salutation and acting.. She taught the children the art of emoting, without any awkwardness. The children happily learnt what they can from the visitor.

Exhibition

Punarnava Ayurveda Trust took part in an academic exhibition, conducted by a school in Chennai run by the Kanchi Kamakoti Trust. About 40 posters giving information about everyday Ayurvedic tips, Ayurveda treatments, do's and don'ts for a better health etc were displayed for the information of the public. Promotion of Ayurveda and information sharing was the motive behind participating in the exhibition.

Supporting Education

Punarnava Ayurveda Trust supports higher education of the students of Rottigoundanur. Ms. Mary, a resident of Rottigoundanur is a construction worker who has three daughters. Her eldest daughter, Deepa is supported by Trust, for getting a degree in Education. We are proud to be given the opportunity to serve the deserving people.

A Special meal at Assisi Snehalaya

The children of Assisi Snehalaya, are fond of good food just like any other. The volunteers of Punarnava Trust cooked as per the suggestion of the children, Chilli Gobi, Wheat Pasta and a sweet dish in their own kitchen and served them. The children were happy to be given such a special meal.
